Gentlemen,

This is not any issue with Westinghouse. This is TAES the company that Ali Azad is running in Charlotte. They have found something after they had certified financials and are correcting. The equivalent of the SEC in Japan has approved Toshiba not be delisted while this correction is being made since they had a deadline to file financials by August 31.

Again not a Westinghouse or AP1000 issue. Related to the non nuclear side of the Toshiba business.

Thanks,
 Danny

Toshiba Delays Earnings Report on Further Accounting Probe

 — 4:52 AM EDT

Toshiba Corp. delayed release of its fiscal 2014 earnings after discovering additional accounting issues that required further investigation.

The company applied to the stocks regulator for permission to postpone the report due today, months later than originally scheduled, it said in a statement Monday. Toshiba said it discovered irregularities at a U.S. unit, without giving further details.

Toshiba earlier this month had said it expected a net loss for the past year without providing a specific number as costs related to the scandal wiped out profit from Toshiba's businesses, which span nuclear reactors, computer memory chips and laptop computers. The company has revamped its board, apologized to investors and appointed a special committee to try to win back trust and prevent further irregularities at the 140-year-old pillar of Japan Inc.

"The company has completely lost investor trust, since no one had expected things to be this bad," Yasuaki Kogure, chief investment officer at SBI Asset Management Co., said prior to the announcement. "We still don't know whether the new management will change the company and how, and what it will consider as an achievable profit margin."

Toshiba said on Aug. 18 forecast operating income of 170 billion yen ($1.4 billion) for the year ended March 2014 and pretax profit of 140 billion yen.

Toshiba scrapped its earnings forecasts in May and announced an investigation of accounting irregularities that was subsequently expanded.

The company is a pillar of Japan Inc., making everything from nuclear power plants to laptop computers and memory chips. During its 140-year history, the company has built up holdings in more than 300 affiliates, partners and customers -- a common practice in Japan.

Toshiba to sell Topcon shares for 50-60 billion yen

TOKYO

Reuters/Thomas Peter

TOKYO Japan's Toshiba Corp (6502.T), struggling to recover from a $1.2 billion accounting scandal, said it was selling all the shares it owns in optical equipment maker Topcon Corp (7732.T) for around 50-60 billion yen ($413-$496 million).

The company said it expects to book a pre-tax gain of 30-40 billion yen from the sale.
